

Title X in Illinois Improving Public Health and Saving Taxpayer Dollars

Between FY2010 - FY2013, funding for Title X was cut by $39.2 million—12.3% in three fiscal years.

Title X Served 92,728 Illinois Residents in 2013

Alivio Medical Center, Aunt Martha's Youth Service Center, and the Illinois Department of Human Services Family Planning Program are the three Title X grantees in Illinois, supporting 84 Title X-funded health centers across the state including county health departments and private non-profits.ⁱ The Title X network served 89,208 women and 3,520 men, for a total of 92,728 residents of Illinois in 2013.ⁱⁱ

Title X provides high-quality family planning services and other preventive health care to low-income and uninsured individuals who may otherwise lack access to health care.

- Of the 92,728 patients served, 85% had incomes at or below 100% of the federal poverty level (FPL), meaning they earned $11,490 a year or less.ⁱⁱⁱ
- Ninety-nine of Title X patients in Illinois earned less than $28,725 a year (250% of the FPL).^{iv}

Title X Saves Illinois's Taxpayer Dollars

Title X supports critical infrastructure needs that are not reimbursable under Medicaid and commercial insurance, such as staff salaries, individual patient education, community-level outreach, and public education about family planning, women's health, and sexual health issues. Without Title X, access to high-quality family planning services for low-income Illinois residents would not be possible.

- The average cost of a Medicaid-funded birth is $12,613.^v In 2008, births resulting from unintended pregnancies cost Illinois's taxpayers $571 million.^{vi}
- The Title X program helps alleviate the costs of unintended pregnancy through contraception, counseling, and other services.^{vii}

Title X is Essential to Improving Public Health and Saving Taxpayer Dollars in Illinois

Cutting funding for family planning services will lead to more unintended pregnancies and higher health care costs in Illinois. Family planning helps women and families plan the timing and spacing of their pregnancies, which results in better educational attainment and economic security; these, in turn, are linked to better health outcomes for women, men, and families.

➤ Family planning services at Illinois's Title X-funded health centers helped prevent 23,400 unintended pregnancies in 2012, which would likely have resulted in 11,600 unintended births and 8,000 abortions.^{viii}

➤ Without publicly funded family planning, the number of unintended pregnancies in Illinois would be 20% higher.^{ix}

➤ Title X-funded services produce significant cost savings to the federal and state governments; services provided at Title X-supported sites in Illinois accounted for nearly $126.1 million in such savings in 2010 alone.^x

Illinois's Title X-funded health centers provide a wide range of services:

- Pregnancy testing
- Contraceptive services
- Pelvic exams
- Screening for cervical and breast cancer
- Screening for high blood pressure, anemia, and diabetes
- Screening for STDs and HIV/AIDS
- Infertility services
- Health education
- Referrals for other health and social services

Additional cuts to Title X funding—especially in the current economy—would harm tens of thousands of low-income and poor families throughout Illinois, in turn costing, not saving, the federal government money.
